Your Travel Tips

In the air

Naturally, you need to keep your children safe, healthy and well-fed during air travel, but the most challenging task when flying as a family is keeping kids busy. Be sure you are rested before you depart, because you are not likely to get much sleep on the plane.

To keep your kids occupied in the air, choose an airline with seat-back movies and video games. Most airlines have digital diversions that will keep most kids happy.

Many airlines offer kids' packs, but it can also be fun to make your own. Try to include a good variety of (quiet) activities: crayons and paper, a book to read, books on tape, toys and games. With a bit of luck, the excitement of a special pack will keep them amused.

Though the airline might provide snacks, children aren't always the best at waiting for a meal. Bring food and plenty of water or juice with you. Children get dehydrated during air travel just as easily as adults. Bananas, raisins, rice cakes, bread sticks, juice, dried fruit, and small boxes of dry cereal are great items to bring.
